Text of the Voorhees Bill. $75,000. WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—There are 27 amendments to the repeal bill which have been introduced in the senate as "intended to be offered." It is generally believed that a very large percentage of them will be offered. Upon this contingency will depend the time of the disposal of the bill after the voting is begun. Following is the full text of the Voorhees bill, which will be substituted in the senate:

That so much of the act approved July 4, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and issue of treasury notes thereupon, and for other purposes" as directs the secretary of the treasury to purchase from time to time silver bullion to the aggregate amount of 4,500,000 ounces or so much thereof as may be offered in each month at the market price thereof, not exceeding one dollar for 371 25-100 grains of pure silver, and to issue in payment for such purchases treasury notes of the United States, be, and the same is hereby repealed, and it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to continue both gold and silver as standard money, and to coin both gold and silver money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, such equality to be secured through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the maintenance of the parity in value of the coins of the two metals, and the equality of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment

It is hereby further declared that the efforts of the government should be steadily directed to the establishment of such a safe system of bimetallism as will maintain at all times the equal power of every dollar coined, or issued by the United States, and in the market and in the payment of debts.

How Sugar Melts. If we drop a lump of sugar into a cup of tea, we find it takes a considerable time to melt if allowed to remain at the bottom of the vessel, but if we hold it up in the spoon near the surface of the liquid it dissolves much more speedily. This is owing to the sugar, as it melts. rendering the portion of the tea containing it heavier. The sweetened part. therefore, descends, leaving the sugar constantly in contact with unsweetened or only partially sweetened tea, in fact, a continual circulation of fluid is promoted until the whole is dissolved. When the sugar is placed or permitted to lie at the bottom of the cup, it dissolves until the layer of fluid next it is thoroughly sweetened or saturated, when it practically ceases to dissolve any further, the sweetened and heavier stratum above it acting for a considerable time, until the law of diffusion comes gradually into play, like an impervious covering in keeping back the lighter un-sweetened fluid above. Hence the reason also why stirring, in breaking up the saturated layer and allowing access to the unsweetened portion, is so effectual in bringing about the uniform sweetening of tea. Life is not infrequently sweetened by the same stirring up process. - Brooklyn Eagle.

Duration of Noah's Flood. In Gould's "Notes and Oneries," volume 6, page 284, the following questions are asked: "Are the floods known as Noah's, Ducalion's and the Atlantean deluges considered to be one and the same?" The editor refers the question to his correspondents, and Mrs. L. T. George of Chicago answers it, incidenticulars and minute details concerning the "great breaking up of the waters:" "The deluge was threatened in the year and continued 377 days. The ark rested lowing." Any reader who imagines that it would be an easy task to figure these details from the Biblical account can
